MY FIVE SOCIAL JUSTICE VALUES:
Kindness, Education, Bravery, Trust, & Respect

I decided to choose these five social justice values because they represent what is most important to me. These values also reflect how I approach and pursue all of my actions regarding activism and interactions with people.
FATEMA MERNISSI

"Being frozen into the passive position of an object whose very existence depends on the eye of its beholder turn the educated modern Western women into a harem slave."

Mernissi was a Moroccan sociologist and the founder of Islamic Feminism.

Mernissi studied the sexual politics of Islamic scripture and was a social justice activist throughout her life. Mernissi helped to improve women’s rights in Muslim nations including things like literacy and career diversity.
"It is impossible to establish a real dialogue with someone who does not consider you an equal."

Cacho is a Mexican journalist, feminist, and civil rights activist.

Cacho's reporting focuses on the violence against and sexual abuse of women and children. Her most famous works were Los Demonios del Edén and her reports on the femicides of Ciudad Juarez. Cacho was also the first woman to testify in Mexico's Supreme Court regarding the case of her unlawful arrest due to her reporting.
